Locating an Article from a Citation

To locate an article from a citation, begin at the Library's homepage.

Scroll down to the search box.

Click the Journals tab.

Click the Find Journals by Title through Full Text Finder link.

Enter the title of the journal in the search box. Do not enter the article title.
Click the exact title from the list.

Enter journal title here

Click the exact title

A list of databases that contains this journal will appear. Select the database that contains the publication date of the article. Different databases may have coverage dates of the same journal. The example below contains only one databases that has coverage to the present.
Search for your article by using either search within this journal feature or using the year/volume and issue. These features may vary from database to database.

If you cannot locate the full text, you may want to request the article through Document Delivery (Interlibrary Loan).

If you have any questions, please contact the Reference Desk (910.521.6656; refdesk@uncp.edu).
